Topics for Today

- Information on what professionals are seeing as individuals, families and communities weather the stresses of illness, deaths and the economic impacts of the pandemic, and what we might anticipate in the future.

- How funders are responding to the enormity of the losses with an eye toward a more equitable recovery and approaches that target local service providers.
• Prior research shows that disruptions to routines, poor access to care, and compounding losses complicate recovery from trauma and grief.

• The severity of reactions may be heightened due to pre-existing physical and mental health conditions; isolation from social networks that bring attention and security; political power that gives communities a seat at the table for determining their own recovery; and economic capital such as income, stable housing, and insurance.

• Large scale studies, including one from the Centers for Disease Control that looked at public health workers, report experiences with at least one serious mental health condition related to their work during the pandemic.

Assessment of Need

- Review of current data and trends.
- Review of current research.
- Conversations with fellow funders.
- Conversations with existing and potential grantees.
- Conversations with community leaders in most affected areas – COVID “hot spots”

Shoe leather (or Zoom) philanthropy
Keeping it Local

- Tapping into CDP “brain trust.”
- Who do we already know?
- Community foundations and other local funders.
- Communities, populations most disproportionately affected.
- And...again...shoe leather (or Zoom) philanthropy.
Root Causes

We are committed to focusing our work so that philanthropy mobilizes to create real, transformative change by listening, learning, understanding and investing in organizations led by BIPOC leaders. We will use our platforms to stand up for what is right and just, and fair. With that, all funding at CDP is done with a social and racial justice lens. We add our voices to stand in solidarity with the courageous people working for change.
Vibrant Emotional Health

- Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) funded National Suicide Prevention Lifeline and the SAMHSA established national Disaster Distress Helpline (DDH).

- Crisis Emotional Care Team – on the ground mental health and emotional support following disasters, emergencies or crisis events across the U.S. and internationally.

- Support to “scale up” as needs increased - build capacity to build emotional resilience.

Key Takeaways

- Listen.
- Be respectful.
- Do your research.
- “Shoe leather” or “Zoom” philanthropy.
- Build organizational capacity.
- Fund with an equity lens.
SAMHSA’s Disaster Distress Helpline, 1-800-985-5990, is a 24/7, 365-day-a-year, national hotline dedicated to providing immediate crisis counseling for people who are experiencing emotional distress related to any natural or human-caused disaster. This toll-free, multilingual, and confidential crisis support service is available to all residents in the United States and its territories. Stress, anxiety, and other depression-like symptoms are common reactions after a disaster. Call or text 1-800-985-5990 to connect with a trained crisis counselor.
CDP, in partnership with New York Life Foundation, has a Disaster Philanthropy Playbook strategy, along with a tool kit, tip sheet and compilation of resources.

The content is designed to support philanthropic knowledge and encourage giving in the areas of mental health, grief and bereavement in the context of disasters.
